What Would You Do

Ethics in College Life

Should I or should I not? We are faced with ethical decisions throughout our day. In college, you may be balancing classes, family, relationships, jobs, or engagement activities. So much to do and not enough time. These events may cause stress in your life and place you in a position having to make ethical decisions to accomplish a task. Join us as we discuss common ethical dilemmas in college. What would you do?

Sponsor Relationships and Funding for Your Research

The Office of Research Development, Office of Technology Transfer & Commercialization, and the Development Office are partnering to provide practical guidance to research investigators about the importance of developing and maintaining relationships with sponsors to ensure greater success in obtaining sponsored funding for your research. This session will cover federal, industry and non-federal (foundation and non-profit) sponsors relationships and will cover practical tips on how to make initial contact, how to develop and maintain those relationships that can benefit the investigator’s search for research funding.

All research investigators at Georgia State are invited to join us for this webinar.
